DRIVES

We provide both AC and DC variable speed drives for all applications. Our approach uses standard products and customizes the packaging and control aspects to fit the customer's needs. This approach allows us to supply special AC & DC drive configurations. Custom cabinet designs allow us to supply a smaller, more dense, drive package if size constraints are an issue. We can also meet special environmental constraints, such as water cooled, air conditioned, dust tight, etc., so that the equipment will operate properly under the installed conditions.

- Low Voltage AC variable speed drives 690 volt AC and below
- Medium Voltage AC variable speed drives up to 6600 volt AC
- DC variable speed drives 750 volt DC and below

POWER FACTOR CORRECTION & HARMONIC FILTRATION

We know that for generated power systems, a lousy power factor means the system is operating inefficiently. We also know that excessive harmonic distortion can actually cause improper operation and/or equipment damage. We supply Power Factor Correction and Harmonic Filtration equipment, which can be a critical part of a power system. These systems can be fixed stage or automated switching type, depending on the system requirements. The automated switching type monitors the Power Factor (PF) or harmonic loads and automatically switches the correct stages on or off. This keeps the PF above the required levels or total harmonic distortion below acceptable levels.

STEAM AND CONDENSATE

Steam Trap Systems specialize in implementing “Effective Steam Trap Maintenance Programs” for Facility Managers looking to Reduce Energy Consumption & Greenhouse Gas Emissions.

Steam traps are automatic valves responsible for discharging condensate, air and other non-condensable gases, while “trapping” steam from traveling beyond its intended point-of-use.

Types of Steam Traps

- Inverted Bucket
- Float and Thermostatic
- Thermostatic
- Differential Condensate Controller
- Controlled Disc
- Bimetallic

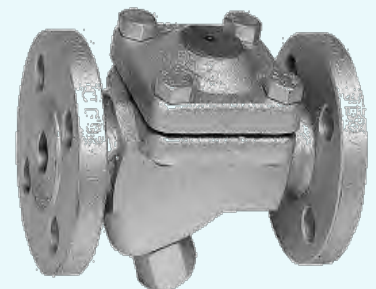

Mechanical traps operate by using the difference in density between steam and condensate. A float within the trap detects the variance in weight between a gas and a liquid.

Thermostatic traps detect the variation in temperature between steam and condensate at the same pressure. The sensing device operates the valve in response to changes in the condensate temperature and pressure.

Thermodynamic Traps use volumetrics and pressure differences that occur when water changes state into gas. These changes act upon the valve directly.
